Run 1742: 27th January 2020

Hare: Dundee – Jannali

Starters Gun

A growing group was assembling in the Jannali shopping Centre car park for the first major bush run of the new year. Some usuals missing - Bingo after the unfortunate demise of her lovely Mum - Taxing dunno maybe still recovering from last week's holocaust & Duck still recovering from yesterday's Australia Day celebrations - but they were more than compensated by a large array of visitors - Twisted Sister, Sir Sewer Sipper & Dicky Knee from Cooma Hash, Curtseying & family - Wallaby & Hugo, Carpet Burn & Dr. Hook fleeing from Coronavirus, Bren Gun who hasn't quite worked out it would be a lot cheaper for him to become a member than paying $7 every week, someone called Paul, who Sniffer wanted to call Apple Tart for some reason & the ever loveable Cam & Andy.

After a short dissertation from Dundee, explaining the mechanics of setting this bush trail - fires meant the National Park was off limits but he'd cleared all spider webs by checking out the trail twice & then acting as TM & noted there were no snakes because the crocs had eaten them - boring very old jokes.

Run Report

Dundee's Delightful Dawdle

Sir Les was making an attempt to coerce the hare into telling him which bush he was going to use so he could shortcut the run once again but Dundee was awake to his tricks & suggested he follow trail & that would show him. Heading south then west across the rail bridge, then south again & the first of a number of checks, which had Sir Les checking the wrong way & refusing to follow trail by heading further west as the pack continued south, then west across a park area & an On Back, which allowed them to encounter the first bush area.

Dr. Hook was dragging the pack along as the next check was found at Tudor Road & it was here we again lost Sir Les, who decided to find another shortcut as the pack ascended a stiff climb up to the trig point of the area, a short On Back only negotiated by Hook because he was so far ahead & a Check had everyone gasping for breath. Twisted Sister had caught up with Sir Sewer Sipper as they awaited Dicky Knee & Dundee took pity & offered them a shortcut to the next check. Isn't he such a kindred spirit?

Heading east to the edge of the escarpment & a slow meander down towards Tudor Road once again to another Check had Sir Les checking the wrong way - serves the silly old bugger right - as Hook had once again found trail heading south to the next piece of bush, which sent them east again down to a welcome halfway bucket (little stream barely running).

Another steep climb & a long On Back had the pack together again as the trail hit the pipeline & a further climb catching the walkers at the next check. Sir Les having created another shortcut - I think we should change his name - was waving from the top of the next hill, thereby removing all chance of keeping the pack together allowing Hook to streak away to the bucket.

Delightful bush run according to Bren Gun, easy to follow with plenty of arrows, flour & toilet paper. Unfortunately, he wasn't the Run Reporter as Sir Les had insisted in handling those duties even though he only completed half the run Offering only seven out of ten. So evaluating that mark suggests he only finished 50% of the run, which would make it fourteen out of ten - I always was a maths genius.

Jannali

- Jannali - Place of the moon but the RA hadn't ever noticed Loan Arranger bearing his bum in the suburb & the rest of us suggested he wasn't looking very hard.
- Railway arrived in 1884 but Jannali didn't have a station until 1994, making Sir Les have to walk to Como or Sutho & it should've stayed that way.

Run Review

Sir Les, Said it was a cool night (bloody heat wave with 100% humidity) said he liked the halfway bucket, only to show he did do part of the run. Then he said he couldn't see the bucket shows he's blind as well as old & useless. Gave the run seven out of ten - see above. Bren Gun jumped in to say he would've given it a ten. Shows the brain capacity of each.

Pricks

Nominee	Nominator	'Cause
Twisted Sister	Pig	Dicky Knee had finished his beer at the bucket & gave it to her to put in the bin for him, which he dutifully complied. It was suggested she should give lessons to our Harriettes to give them similar manners.
Scotch Mist	Grewsome	Not sure about this one but it was something to do with her new Scottish suntan - bright red. Everyone laughed so it was funny.
Dirty Weekend	Sir Les	Something about talking & the bucket not being open but I don't believe it as she wouldn't do anything wrong.
Sir Les	Dicky Knee	Last year he had ran out of fuel at Rover's & was given some fuel to get him out of town - understandable two days would've been a long time - but he's still awaiting the reciprocation.
Sir Les	Merkin	Suggesting the door was open for the bucket thereby making Sir Les's jibe superfluous.
Dr. Hook	Hannibal Lector	for bringing the coronavirus back from Wuhan - Hook swears he's never been to Wuhan but CB was shaking her head.
